N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage
Your love in a cottage is hungry,
Your vine is a for flies—
Your milkmaid shocks the Graces,
And simplicity talks of pies!
You lie down to your shady slumber
And wake with a bug in your ear,
And your damsel that walks in the morning shod like a mountaineer

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage
True love at home on a carpet,
And mightily likes his
And true love has an eye for a dinner,
And starves beneath shady
His wing is the fan of a lady,
His foot's an invisible thing,
And his arrow is tipped with a jewel,
And shot from a silver string

Man's the bad child of the universe

JAMES OILFIELD, Lawyer

Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being daily wise and rudely great
With too much knowledge for the Sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the Stoic's rude

Mike in ignorance has reason such Worth he thinks too little or too much,
 Clot of the earth in pass on all confused,
 Still by himself used or disused, Cre'd him to rise and hold to fall,
 Great lord of all that yet a prey to all,
 Sole judge of truth in endless error hurld,
 The glory just and riddle of the world!

Before the beginning of years,
There came to the making of man
Time with a gift of tears.

Grief, with a glass that ran,
 Pleasure with pain for heaven,
 Summer with flowers that fall,
 Remembrance fallen from heaven,
 And midness men from hell,
 Strength without hands to smite,
 Love that endures for a breath;
 Night the shadow of light

I—Manners Definitions

Manners must adorn knowledge, and smooth its way through the world Like a great rough diamond, it may do very well in a closet by way of curiosity, and also for its intrinsic value, but it will never be worn, unless shined, if it is not polished

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 1 July, 1748

Virtue and learning, like gold, have their intrinsic value, but if they are not polished they certainly lose a great deal of their lustre and even polished brass will shine upon more people than rough gold

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 March, 1747

10 It is sufficient to deserve well, one must please well Awkward, disagreeable merit will never win anybody far

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Sept., 1747

11 A fine person, a beautiful face, a deportment gives them decent grace?

V—Money: Love Money

See

1 My theme is always one, and was—
"Radix malorum Cupiditas"

CHAUCER, Pardoner's Tale Prologue, l 5

2 The love of money is the mother city of evils (Τὸ φιλαργυρία ἐστὶ μητρόπολις τῶν κακῶν)

(DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes vi, 50)

For the love of money is root of all evil which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many

New Testament Timothy, vi, 10 Often incorrectly quoted, "Money is the root of all evil" The Latin is the oft quoted, "Radix malorum est cupiditas" Mark Twain is credited with amending this to 'Lack of money is the root of all evil' Attributed also to Bernard Shaw

The love of money and the love of learning seldom meet

GEORGE HARRERT, Jacula Prudentium

The love of money grows as the money it grows (Crescit amor quantum ipsa pecunia crescit)

JUVENAL, Satires Sat xiv, l 139 definition which, when reflects what chosen people like, doubt about the justice of using Philistine as a synonym for an enemy of culture

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p 257

Philistine, as a term applied to the ill behaved and ignorant, or persons of low and material-

I—Pleasure Definitions

The great pleasure in life is doing what people say you cannot do

WALTER BACONOT, Literary Studies Vol 1, p 171

Pleasure may perfect us as truly as prayer

CHANNING, Note-Book Joy

Nor do I call pleasures idleness, or time lost, provided they are the pleasures of a rational being

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747

Distinguish carefully between the pleasures of a man of fashion, and the vices of a scoundrel, pursue the former, and abhor the latter, like a man of sense

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750

Pleasure must not, nay, cannot, be the business of a man of and character, but it be,
and is, relief, his reward

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 May, 1750

The pleasure of life is according to the that lives it, and not according to the work or place

EMERSON, Conduct of Life Fate

Wherefore call pleasure the alpha and omega of a blessed life. Pleasure is our first and kindred good (*Ταῖς γὰρ ἀγαθὰς πρῶτον

RAILROAD

The progress of invention is really a threat Whenever I see a railroad I look for a republic

EMERSON, Journals, 1

These railroads—could but the whistle be made musical and the rumble and the jar got rid of—are positively the greatest blessing that the ages have wrought out for us. They give us wings they annihilate the toil and dust of pilgrimage they spiritualize travel!

HAWTHORNE, House of Seven Gables Ch 17

Your railroad, when you come to understand it, is only a device for making the world smaller

RUSKIN, Modern Painters Pt iv, ch 17, sec 35

Going by railroad I do not consider as travelling heaven this season? But if we stay at home and mind our business who will want railroads?

We do not ride on the railroad, it rides us
